SUMMER READING GAME. A climax to the summer reading game for young patrons of the Warren County Bookmobile was held Friday afternoon when the prize winners were treated to a party at the Warren Public Library.

The reading game required that each child read and report on a specified number of books. While many other children throughout the county participated, the prize winners were the only ones eligible for attendance to the party. The success of this year's game has led to plans for a similar program for next summer.

ville; Susan Cowles, of Wrightsville; Everta Walters, Clarendon; Geraldine Blum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray and Blum, R. D. 1, Clarendon; and Jeannette Fileger, of Clarendon.

Not present for the picture was Jimmie Skinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Skinner, R. D. 2, Russell.

NEW CHARGING SYSTEM. The Warren Public Library will institute a new charging system for the borrowing of books on Sept. 1. Under the new system handling time by the Library staff will be reduced as under the old system books and cards went through five different channels when they were borrowed from the Library.

Here Mrs. Carroll Fowler explains to Bruce Albaugh the new system. Every patron of the Library will have a card that he or she must present upon borrowing a book or books.

Semi Goes Wild; Driver Escapes Serious Injury

A large semi and trailer came to an untimely end Wednesday afternoon when it took a wild ride down a 40-foot embankment and landed bottomside up in the Allegheny River. The mishap occurred on Rt. 62 about three miles above Tidioute. The driver, Francis Coudriet, 21, of Clearfield, was enroute to Tidioute with a small load of lumber and nails for the King Lumber & Supply Co. He is employed by the Soult Wholesale Co., of Clearfield.

According to the driver, the wheels of his truck dropped off the highway onto the berm. Losing control, he plunged through five guard rails, sheared off a utility pole and, rolling down the steep bank, came to rest in the shallow water. He crawled out of the cab and made his way back up the bank where a passing motorist, Bill Anderson of Tidioute, drove him to a doctor's office for treatment. He received a cut over the left eye requiring three clamps, and lacerations of the nose and right forearm.

Trooper George Kaleina of the Warren State Police barracks investigated the accident. The vehicle was pulled out of the river by Schwab's tow truck from Tidioute and a truck with winch from Bowen White in Warren. The truck was completely demolished.

SEN. MANSFIELD'S PROPOSAL

By Walter Lippmann

The outlook in the Congo is ominous, foreshadowing the distinct possibility that Lumumba will demand the withdrawal of all the U. N. force or, it may be, of the white U.N. forces. If either of these demands is made the Security Council will be faced not only with a grave question of law but also with an exceedingly dangerous situation in fact.

For under existing doctrine, a U. N. force can enter a member country only by invitation of the government. Presumably, it can remain there only with the consent of the government. If Lumumba withdraws that consent, as he has threatened to do, the Security Council will have to make a new decision. If it withdraws under the existing doctrine, it must either evacuate the whole European population with it or leave that population to the mercy of the anti-white violence which reigns in the Congo. If the U. N. decides to stay, it runs the risk of being involved in a guerrilla war which would have large international consequences.

Hard as the choices are, it is no longer possible in honor and good faith for the U.N. to abandon the responsibility it has assumed. It must stay. But if Lumumba demands only the withdrawal of the white troops in the U. N. force? Here there may be some room for negotiation in the difference between complete withdrawal of the white contingent and their redeployment. The U. N. can be flexible. But it cannot sanction the principle that only colored troops may go to a Negro country and, conversely, that only white troops can go to a white country. To admit this rule would be to write into the charter of the U. N. the principle of segregation.

As far as anyone can at a distance make out Lumumba's confused and fluctuating purposes, they appear to be these: To base his personal power to rule a centralized Congo state on rallying the natives against the Europeans and North Americans, on the assistance of troops from African countries which are unfriendly to the West, on material and technical aid from Communist nations, and on the willingness of the Soviet Union to use its political power to nullify the U. N.

The situation is a dangerous one. It is dangerous to have anarchy and violence in the heart of Africa, and it would mean great suffering both for the whites and the Negroes alike. It is dangerous to have a vast rich country which is at the strategic center of Africa, moving toward violent opposition to the West and abject dependence on the East.

The most hopeful fact in this dark and tangled situation is that all the powers concerned have a vital interest in avoiding chaos and great power intervention.

In the front ranks are the neighboring African states. Their greatest hopes for the future are bound up with the influence of the U. N. in which they themselves now hold great power. It is hard to see how they can hope to have security, retain their independence, and get economic and technical aid, unless the U. N. becomes the mediator between them and the rest of the world.

It is obvious that all of Western Europe and that all of the American nations have a deep interest in supporting the U. N. For only through the U. N. can they hope to have effective political intercourse with black Africa.

And the Soviet Union? Could it hope to profit from Lumumba's racism, considering the fact that the Russians are irretrievably white men. This week Americans have been beaten up because they were not easily distinguished from Belgians. A vast number of Russians, in spite of their ideology, are also indistinguishable from the Belgians. As a matter of fact, most of the Russians are Europeans.

In this context, we ought, I believe, to examine very seriously and sympathetically Sen. Mansfield's speech on Monday. His central thesis is that the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R. renounce military intervention in Africa, that they agree to refrain from seeking new bases, and that they agree to withdraw from existing bases as the Security Council may direct. Sen. Mansfield would channel all military action by the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R. and all economic action through the United Nations.

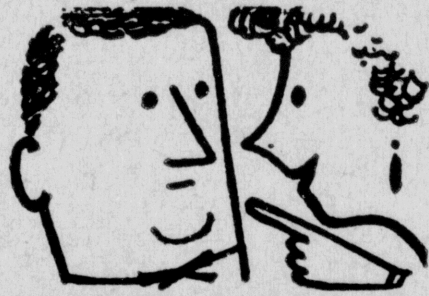

If there were such an agreement, Algeria would, of course, have to be excluded. The main idea would not be affected by this exclusion. For the crucial point is to have an agreement that the Soviet Union and the United States will respect the military neutrality of the African continent. As things stand today, the Soviet has no bases in Africa. We do have a few bases. But they are rapidly ceasing to be military assets and are becoming military liabilities.

The value of Sen. Mansfield's proposal is that it rests on a true understanding of the Congo problem -- that the supreme danger in that problem is that it might provoke a duel between the Soviet Union and the NATO powers. Sen. Mansfield is right, and he is most realistic, in arguing that if the Congo problem is soluble, it can be only because there is an underlying agreement between the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R. to let the problem be solved.

This is statesmanship and it is leadership, not in the form of high sounding generalities but applied specifically to the hardest problem which now troubles the world.

TIDIOUTE SCHOOL BUILDING PROJECT STEP CLOSER TO REALIZATION

Tidioute is one step closer to realization of its school building plans as a result of a meeting Wednesday night when resolutions were passed by individual boards and the jointure board. The resolutions authorize the signing of agreement and lease with the State School Building Authority. A delegation comprised of president or vice president and secretary of each board and the jointure board will meet with state officials in Harrisburg Sept. 12 to sign the actual agreements and lease.

In effect, this action empowers the State School Board Authority to include the Tidioute project in a forthcoming issue of school lease revenue bonds for construction purposes. The state authority leases the remodeled building and new elementary school from the Tidioute Area Joint School District which will pay an annual rental of approximately $59,375., or until the bonds are retired.

Estimated cost of the Tidioute project is $893,109.68. This includes remodeling of the present Hunter Memorial School for use as a junior-senior high school, converting the gymnasium to a cafeteria and certain classrooms, and construction of a new elementary school with combination auditorium-gymnasium. Present school enrollment is 413 pupils in elementary and secondary grades. Rated capacity of the new construction is 550.

OBSERVATIONS

By Bob Walsh

SWIMMING POOL POLLS

"The new high school development is the right location for the swimming pool and it would be a mistake to build it elsewhere -- if the high school site is to be what it should be."

Those are not our words. They were written in 1954, after the Warren Junior Chamber of Commerce had made a thorough study of what the people of Warren wanted in the way of recreation, and additional interest had been stirred by actions of the Citizens Recreation Committee.

They were the words of consultants, paid to do a job, at the recommendation of the National Recreation Association, a group highly respected by industrial and civic leaders throughout the nation, and financed by wealthy citizens to help communities enjoy the knowledge gained through the mistakes and experiences of other.

If there is anything radically wrong with that approach, let us burn the history books and close the school doors.

The immediate subject under study which inspired those words in the first paragraph involved Memorial field. Those making the study were of the opinion that it was not large enough to serve as a community playfield and recreation center. They concluded that it was not the logical location for the one outdoor swimming pool which Warren should have.

The study of Memorial field moved the Jaycees to take a survey in an effort to determine what Warren wanted. Two previous surveys had revealed that the vote was lopsidedly in favor of a pool. This was not surprising, inasmuch as this is customary in all towns which lack such a facility.

But the Jaycees did a reasonably thorough job in an effort to get back of the usual thin approach that consistently comes up with a vote favoring a swimming pool. They asked each citizen to list five choices in the order of their preference. This, they hoped, would offer depth and alternatives.

Six thousand, four hundred and forty people took part in the poll. Counting first, second, third, fourth, and fifth vote totals, the swimming pool received 5,591 votes. It also topped all other facilities in either first or second vote totals. The first choice figures showed 2,262 for the pool, 1,381 for a permanent grandstand, and 752 for a lighted athletic field.

Second place choices provided 1341 for the swimming pool, 1127 for an ice skating rink, and 1094 for a permanent grandstand.

(Some people not only want to sit down for their fun but they want to do it permanently.)

In the total of all choices the pool led with the 5591 we have mentioned. The permanent seats got 4674, and ice skating came in with 4570. A roller rink was next with 3166. Tennis received 3033.

Such sports as golf were not included because the concern was limited to facilities within the community, and specifically for Memorial field. We believe it would have been better if the grandstand and lights had been left out. We then would have had a better slant on the wants of people in respect to participation facilities. But the Memorial field problem involved more than that, and the poll was broad enough to help provide many answers.

Obviously many of the wants would be solved with an adequate school facility. The grandstands and lights were a problem to be settled there and not for a field which plainly had other possibilities in its future.

With PONY league ball on its way out and high school officials opposed to the expense of lights and their relative dangers, unsupported by assurance of an adequate return, the lights even then were passe. The grandstand also would take care of itself in a complete school plant, and dressing rooms, always included in permanent seating plans would be provided in a modern school.

Those with an ounce of vision saw these facts plainly and waited patiently for them to develop. Meanwhile, skating was provided on Beaty field, and tennis was a complement of the hard-surfaced area. Brine pipes and a compressor would have made this a completely satisfactory project, but again Warren settled for half measure.

The only other activity that received enough votes to have much meaning, and they were fourth and fifth place choices, was basketball. It enjoyed a 1383 count in the total figures. There were that many who thought outdoor courts would be a good idea if their first, second, and third choices were not approved (including those seats and lights).

So it seems that all the choices that received major attention have been at least partially provided or are about to be, except the swimming pool, which outstripped all others, and basketball courts, which were tossed in as an obvious asset to a play area.

The reason people want a swimming pool is apparent. It is a sport which can be enjoyed by all ages and is a health-giving body-building activity. It takes people into the sunshine and teams up with other activities, such as picnicking, on the family level.

And in a town where the boys have been given so much attention through such organizations as the Hot Stove League, the feminine side of the house is bound to be heard from when a swimming pool is mentioned. At last there is a possibility that some money will be spent on a facility which will directly benefit them. The swimming pool is a shoo-in when a fair poll is taken of an entire community. It even wins some times when the deck is stacked.

Powers Failed His Country

By Inez Robb

Whenever I am tempted to dust off someone who will, when the chips are down, go to any length to save his own neck, as did that tower of jelly, Francis Gary Powers, I reread an excellent novel published soon after the end of World War II.

This book, a study of the threshold of heroism in a handful of men and women, is "The Steeper Cliff" by David Davidson, published by Random House, if you are taken with an itch to read it. Just what my threshold would be, under pressure, I do not know, but I sincerely pray God that it would be consonant with my country's and my own honor.

During World War II and later and especially during the Korean War I could not and would not believe that men in the American Armed forces did not know what they were fighting for. This charge was repeated during both wars until it became a cliché.

It seemed not only impossible but incredible to me that men with sufficient brains to qualify for the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps and the Air Force, men who were the products of American schools, could be so colossally ignorant that they were unaware or unable to comprehend the great stakes at issue.

Even the 20-odd defectors to the Communist side at the end of the Korean War couldn't convince me of this charge of wholesale stupidity. Scarcely one of that lot came from a grossly underprivileged or broken home from which little could be expected.

Well, I still don't believe that men old enough to defend their country in war and in peace are, on the whole, political morons. But Powers' behavior on the witness stand certainly forces me to admit that we produce a percentage of unreliaables who either don't comprehend the vital issues of their day or who couldn't care less, as long as they get theirs and are taken care of.

Powers, it would seem, has always been just bright enough to determine on which side his bread is buttered, as when he took the $30,000 per year job to pilot the U-2. And when he fell in with the Soviet script prepared for his mock trial in Moscow.

I am not impressed by Powers' reported remark after the trial and his own lawyer's slashing denunciation of the United States, "After all, I am an American and I don't want any part of it." It would not have been necessary for Powers to make that post-trial statement if he had stood in the dock and behaved like an honorable American in the first place.

Indeed, had he been worth a fraction of the $30,000 annually the Central Intelligence Agency is still paying him, he would either have destroyed his plane or himself. But lacking the intestinal fortitude to do either, I suppose it is too much to expect him to have stood tall at his trial.

But Powers' lack of character leads to a very interesting speculation: How does the C. I. A. choose its agents? What kind of character and intelligence checks does the agency make? Did it know that Powers had never been sufficiently interested in his country to vote in any election after he came of age? Is this not a significant indictment of any man?

What does the National Security Agency, which has just lost two young men who have apparently gone behind the Iron Curtain, do to screen the persons it employs? And after employing individuals, does it ever keep an eye on them? Did the agency know that one of the two men, who are missing and thought to have defected to communism, was under psychiatric treatment?

An administration that bungled the U-2 episode from the beginning has now promised Powers not only immunity when he returns to the U.S.A. but payment of his annual salary of $30,000 as long as he is in prison. My advice to Powers is to save his money and find a nice, pleasant spot outside the U.S.A. in which eventually to live and spend it. Because there are a great many disgruntled Americans who are bitterly resentful of paying a fat salary to a man who failed at every opportunity to keep his bargain with his country.

STILL UNHAPPY. This is what the Warren South Siders mean when they talk of a smoke problem. The camera filters out much of the blackness and does not tell a true story. With one plant closed down in that area the smudge that destroys paint jobs and washings, and adds hours to housekeeping toil has not been as bad as before.

This stack is in an industrial area and has every right to burn coal in large quantities. The lack is found in the law which does not specify equipment and methods to be used for the reduction of the impurities.

Matter of Fact . . .

NIXON'S DANGER IN THE SOUTH

By Joseph Alsop

The rising anti-Catholic agitation in the South, which is already beginning to recall 1928, is obviously aimed to take the South's votes away from Sen. John F. Kennedy. In reality, however, it is an equally painful problem for Vice-President Richard M. Nixon.

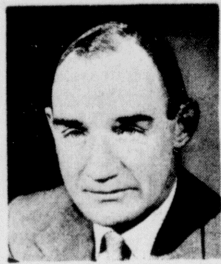

It goes without saying that if Nixon benefits in the South by this increasingly sharp outburst of anti-Catholicism, he will be an entirely involuntary beneficiary. He has had nothing whatever to do with it. He has even directed all of his campaign workers never to mention the so-called religious issue in private talk.

In the same fashion, former President Herbert Hoover was also an involuntary beneficiary of the vicious attack on Alfred E. Smith's religious faith. Yet anyone who studies the returns from the 1928 election can quite easily see that Hoover's innocence was almost irrelevant. Besides producing important but temporary Republican gains in the South, the anti-Catholic outburst in 1928 caused heavy and more enduring Republican losses in the North.

Prior to 1928 many of the nation's big cities, like Chicago, had been traditionally controlled by Republican city machines. After 1928 the Republican party had all but sunk from sight in every big city in the country except Philadelphia and Cincinnati, where Republicans lingered on for a while. The reason for this grave setback was the Northern Catholic reaction to the anti-Catholicism in the South. The bleak fact of the agitation itself, without regard to Hoover's innocence or responsibility, was what affected the Northern Catholics that year.

In 1928, it is also well to remember, Roman Catholics constituted only 10 per cent of the voting population. Today they constitute 25 per cent, with the heaviest concentrations in the great industrial states which any winning Presidential candidate must carry.

In recent years, furthermore, the Catholic migration to the Republican party, which began in 1940, has been the most significant single trend in American politics. The Catholics in very low income groups, like the Puerto Ricans in New York, remain solidly Democratic. This naturally weights the Catholic vote in favor of the Democrats. But despite this weighting, President Eisenhower is authoritatively estimated to have won the support of at least 55 per cent of all the Catholic voters in New York state in 1956.

This means that in 1956, Eisenhower secured a commanding lead among all New York state's Catholics from the lower middle-income level upward. Today, moreover, when Northern Catholics are still unaware of the anti-Catholic outburst in the South, Sen. John F. Kennedy has by no means won back all the Republican-voting Catholics.

So far as this reporter can learn by door - bell ringing Kennedy's chance of winning back any individual Republican - voting Catholic quite largely depends on the individual's date of migration into the Republican party. If the first Republican vote was cast in 1956, a return to the Democratic fold is highly probable. If the date was 1952, it is much less probable, and so it goes, back to 1940.

On this basis, Kennedy now seems likely to get about 60 per cent of the Catholic votes in New York. This transfer of Catholics to Kennedy is a sore handicap for Nixon, but it is not an insurmountable handicap. Of the 7,100,000 New Yorkers who voted in 1956, 30 per cent, or something like 2,150,000 were Catholics. If the best estimates are correct, Eisenhower therefore got the votes of about 1,170,000 Catholics in New York.

If 60 per cent of New York's Catholics now vote for Kennedy, about 320,000 votes will thereby be transferred from the Republican to the Democratic column. Without allowing for losses among Protestants, which are impossible to estimate, the Catholic transfer means a cut in Eisenhower's 1956 majority of about 640,000 votes. But Eisenhower carried New York by better than 1,500,000 votes.

In other words the degree of Catholic transfer that now seems likely is very far from certain to defeat Nixon in the crucial big states of the North. Nixon has a good chance, too, of reducing the transfer. The truth is that Nixon appeals very strongly to the naturally conservative Catholics.

But let the anti-Catholic agitation in the South gain volume and produce the inevitable effects in the North. Then Kennedy may well take 80 per cent of the New York Catholics. The transfer will then reach something like 750,000 votes, causing a drop in the 1956 Republican majority of over 1,500,000 -- in short the total amount of the majority.

There's Nixon's problem, in coldly practical, political terms. In the long run, Nixon will hardly be able to solve this problem by refusing to discuss the religious issue, and by ordering his campaign workers to do likewise. At a guess, he will be unable to solve the problem without the strongest sort of affirmative action to halt the Southern anti-Catholic agitation. If the agitation continues, nothing less than strong affirmative action can really be counted on to prevent a Northern reaction to what is happening in the South.

President Should Have Congress With Him

By
Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON. -- In passing the blame back and forth for the failure of this bobtail session of Congress both parties are playing a kind of political ping-pong. Each side hopes that the score will be an asset in the coming campaign.

But what the session has demonstrated once again is that small minorities in each party can frustrate the will of the majority. This was to have been expected in a special session in a Presidential year and especially with the Presidential candidates confronting each other in the Senate chamber.

Yet what we are seeing is only an acute form of the paralysis that is a constant threat when the executive branch and the legislative branch are held by opposing parties. And, if the latest Gallup poll is any indicator, the election of Vice-President Nixon could mean that this would be the condition for the next four to eight years. That poll shows that with the five percent of don't-knows divided in the same ratio as the decideds 59 percent would rather see the Democrats win Congress.

This is equivalent to the landslide majority of two years ago. It would seem to be a powerful argument for the election of Senator Kennedy, so that with the executive and the legislature held by the same party responsibility could be clearly fixed for what is done or left undone. There is a catch in this, however, since some of the chief frustrators, as the Republicans are only too happy to point out, are in Kennedy's party.

Two Democrats plus the four Republicans on the House Rules Committee have succeeded at this writing in preventing the Congress from taking final action on aid to education and housing. One of the Democrats, it is hardly necessary to add, is Chairman Howard W. Smith of Virginia, who follows the Byrd line in opposition to just about everything in the Democratic platform.

The Republicans are Leo Allen of Illinois, Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee and Hamer H. Budge of Idaho. They have consistently over the years voted with Smith to bottle up legislation that might otherwise pass the House. This had made the Rules Committee the primary obstacle to legislation that has often had the support of demonstrable majorities. On the other side of the Capitol Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), in his capacity as chairman of the Judiciary Committee has achieved a solid piece of block-and-tackle work. Despite many protests from both Republicans and Democrats, he has held up the nomination of Robert A. Bicks to be Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Anti-Trust Division.

For 16 months Bicks has been acting assistant for anti-trust enforcement. During this period the 33-year-old New York lawyer has prosecuted a series of anti-trust cases more vigorously than at any time since the days of Thurman Arnold in the 'thirties. The list of companies he has filed cases against is a roster of corporation giants.

Pressure from these powerful sources is believed to be the real explanation for holding up the Bicks nomination. Eastland has said that the committee cannot report out the nomination without hearing further witnesses, although so far as is known there is no one desiring to be heard. As this is written the committee has no hearings scheduled.

JP'S DONATION Stephen Ostridge (right), of Grand Valley, Justice of the Peace of Triumph township, donates to Hon. Judge Alexander C. Flick, Jr. a check from the Warren-Forest County Minor Judiciary Association to the Warren County Probation Association. Mr. Ostridge was past president of the justices organization, which heard Judge Flick explain the history and the workings of the Probation Association in a talk Wednesday evening.

Elected to serve as officers for the 1960-61 term of the Judiciary Association were J. Regis Thompson, of Youngville, president, John Miley, of Clarendon, vice-president; and Martha Lawson, of Warren, secretary-treasurer.

At the meeting eleven justices were present to hear the Judge speak on the probation system in Warren County. Many of those in attendance were newly elected this year and were unfamiliar with this county's policy in dealing with juvenile delinquents.

Attorney Generals in many states, the head of the American Bar Association meeting here, Whitney North Seymour, and many others have appealed to the committee to act. Yet, as Chairman Eastland exercises a seemingly unchallengeable veto, it is a perfect example of how the seniority and the committee system combine to give obstructive power to tiny minorities.

Ever since 1954 when the Republicans lost their small majority in House and Senate the Congress has been Democratic and the President has been nominally a Republican. Because the President is a national hero with wide bipartisan support and because Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson has never challenged him, accepting his vetoes as the order of the day, the relationship has not been too troubled.

But it requires little imagination to see how the situation would be altered if Nixon were in the White House and particularly if it were suspected that he owed his victory to religious prejudice in a close election. The Senate is certain to be Democratic after January. In order to capture the House, Republicans would have to win 65 seats, and that is a landslide which certainly at this writing is not in the cards. Here is a prescription for fratricidal stalemate at a moment in history when we can least afford stalemate.

"So what's wrong with polka-dot diapers?"

Not a thing.

It's just that we think they're . . . well, just a bit unusual, wouldn't you say?

Well, how were we to know they're the latest thing? It's been quite a while since we've had occasion to wear them.

What's this got to do with the water business?

Darned if we know.

ON PRE-CENSORSHIP OF FILMS

Before the United States Supreme Court recessed in June it agreed to rule on an appeal attacking censorship of motion pictures prior to their exhibition. The appeal is based on the contention that pre-censorship of films violates constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press.

The Times Film Corporation, the distributor of the film, "Don Juan", asked the high court to "clear up the confusion" by applying to the showing of movies "the same cardinal principles governing other media of communication -- which principles uniformly condemn censorship." Past Supreme Court decisions in movie censorship cases never have touched on the basic question: is pre-censorship of movies unconstitutional? Cases have been decided on more limited grounds -- either the picture in question wasn't obscene or the criterion of immorality (as opposed to obscenity) is unconstitutionally vague.

The "Don Juan" case -- an admitted test case -- arose in connection with Chicago's censorship power which is lodged in the Police Department. Times Film paid a license fee to the city, but refused to submit the picture -- a filmed version of Mozart's opera-for-censorship. The Police Department denied the license, and the court fight to get the picture shown -- without pre-censorship -- began.

Herman M. Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America, expressed his hopes that the "Don Juan" case will result in the Supreme Court's decreeing "full protection of the Bill of Rights to motion pictures." Levy pointed out that while the Supreme Court "had held that motion pictures come within the protection of the Bill of Rights, it has not held that motion pictures are entitled to full protection." He asked "Why should radio, television, newspapers, etc., and not motion pictures have full freedom from prior censorship?" The Supreme Court is not expected to rule on the "Don Juan" case until next fall or winter. The American Civil Liberties Union, and its affiliate, the Illinois Division, ACLU plan to participate in the Supreme Court appeal. Pending the high court's decision "Don Juan" cannot be shown in Chicago.

Neither can the French film, "The Lovers." However, unlike the Time Film Corporation, which refused to submit "Don Juan" for pre-censorship Zenith International Pictures showed "The Lovers" to the Chicago Police Department. To no avail; the police wouldn't give it a license. Zenith took the case to the courts in an attempt to get an injunction to force Chicago to license the film. Currently, the distributor is appealing a ruling by Judge William J. Campbell of the U. S. District Court that Chicago's movie censorship law is legal because it does not interfere with movie production.

WINS VINDICATION

The Institute of Pacific relations has won a significant vindication of old McCarthyism charges that certain of its associated and activities, in the years 1933 to 1950, were suspect.

Exoneration was contained in a decision of Federal District Judge David E. Edelstein restoring the tax-exempt status of the International IPR. It had been revoked for 1955 in a ruling relying on accusations made at hearings of the Senate against the revocation, the Institute submitted copies of all its publications in 1953-55, proceedings of its international conferences since its founding in 1925, and testimony of distinguished roster of educators. In contrast, the government rested its case entirely on reports of the Subcommittee.

Judge Edelstein found that the Institute was engaged "in the dissemination of controversial and partisan propaganda and made no attempt to influence the policies and/or actions of any government or governmental officials." On the contrary, he found the organization to be an educational organization within the meaning of the law.

"There is not in this case the shadow of a scintilla of evidence to meet the plaintiff's case for the year 1955 other than that which can be dragged in by the back door on the flimsy vehicle of what is in effect no more than the plaintiff's plea of not guilty to the ancient charges against it," Judge Edelstein observed. "Moreover, it is in this case that the plaintiff has for the first time had its 'day in court' on those charges. The Government has not seen fit to join issue with the plaintiff . . . in any meaningful way."

By relying solely on the McCarran Committee hearings of earlier years to support its argument for revocation of tax exemption in 1955, and by claiming the Institute has not changed since those hearings, the justice said, "the Government concedes that it cannot specifically meet issues posed for the later years by the plaintiff's case; and if it cannot meet those issues, refusing even the attempt, the 'no change' argument must inevitably be resolved in the plaintiff's favor . . . The legislative report was based upon hearing in which the plaintiff was not free to present its own case in its own way. In choosing to rely exclusively on the latter, the Government has not only not truly joined issue, but it appears to invite the Court's adverse decision.

Community Chest Adopts $88,500 Goal For 1960

Warren County Community Chest President Edgar B. Pendleton announced today that a goal of $88,500 has been adopted by the agency for the 1960 drive. The figure, eight per cent higher than the amount raised last year, was adopted on recommendation of the Community Chest Budget Committee which for several months has been meeting with member agencies and studying the needs of each organization.

Participating bodies in the Chest effort are the Boy Scouts, YWCA, YMCA, Salvation Army, Family Service and Children's Aid Society, Warren Relief Association, Visiting Nurses Association, Child Health Center, and the USO.

The goal and the campaign dates of October 3 through 17 were established by the Chest's Board of Directors at a recent meeting. In a statement Chest President Pendleton pointed out that the ten agencies had requested grants totalling $110,000 so that the goal is far short of filling the actual needs of the local service groups.

However, last year's campaign fell $4,000 short of the 1959 goal, and contributors this year must raise their offerings by at least eight per cent to push the amount raised over the top.

Campaign headquarters have been established in Room 307 of the Warren Bank and Trust Building where the phone number is RA 3-8794. Directors and workers of the campaign will be announced at a later date.

Storm Causes Plane To Crash Near Tidioute

The heavy rain storms which occurred throughout this area last evening forced down a plane operated by William Davidson, of Mentor, Ohio, on the Bruce Ziegler farm, one mile south of Tidioute. Davidson, who escaped injury in the crash, was reported to be in a slight state of shock after the incident, but has continued on his way to Ohio.

The pilot, who is probably in his late 30s, was apparently carrying machine parts from Ithaca, N.Y., to Cincinnati, Ohio. Davidson was seen circling Tidioute during the storm, and was spotted making a crash landing in the plowed field on Ziegler's farm.

The Warren State police investigated the incident Thursday night and early Friday morning, having received report of the crash about 10:30 p.m. Thursday night.

ASIDES

UNFAIR POLITICS

We heard this week that the two candidates for our top office have signed a pledge to keep it clean this fall. They may do that, but what will be the policy of those supporting them and of the party professionals. For example, a GOP sheet is credited with quoting from an Alsop article to the effect that Kennedy's father had financed and masterminded the effort to gain the nomination for his son because of his own frustrations. But the GOP piece neglected to quote Alsop's next sentence in which he said that this claim was not so.

This is using a nationally known writer to convince the public of a thought which that very writer has denied, and denied in the very article being quoted. This is clean politics?

THE RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Baptists in the South are heading up a powerful drive to defeat Kennedy because of his religion, and there are other groups joining the effort. Graham is quoted as saying that there is nothing wrong with making religion one of the campaign issues.

We believe the religious issue would have raised a much less ugly head and a smaller one if the press hadn't built it up in continuous articles since the thought of Kennedy as a candidate was born. This lends credence to the claim that the press is predominantly Republican.

NOT SO GOOD

We note a published boast to the effect that sophomores in fourteen of our state colleges are equal in intelligence to the average of the nation. In social studies and writing they have a slight edge, but are behind in reading and mathematics.

We would call that bad news. Any school, or college, or groups of the same, that is equal only to the average has little about which to be satisfied. Because that average is determined by the drag-down of the worst.

And to be lower than the average in any subjects should move us to action concerning improvement of in any subjects should move us to action concerning improvement of our state colleges. Pennsylvania is wealthy enough to have public schools and state colleges that are better than the average, and in fact are as good as the best. Why is it not so?

EDUCATIONAL TV

The use of television to assist our educators on the local level is available even now if we will utilize it. The only way it will become more prevalent and be improved is by school districts' adopting it and pioneering its eventual advantages.

There already is help. The federal government has allotted money for this purpose and it is available on a fifty-fifty basis. Subjects most taught are science, mathematics, and modern foreign languages.

WHAT WOULD WE DO WITHOUT THEM?

The "them" we have in mind are the negro boys who represent us in international sports. Remove all of the point-getters from our ranks who are negroes and our team would be greatly weakened.

This suggests that Africa may some day be a power in sports if it can develop a civilization that encourages widespread participation in a variety of competitive activities. This no doubt will evolve if the atomic-happy natives of our small planet can be patient.

However, there is another aspect of the racial line in sport that may prove no individual blood line has a physical advantage. Down through American history the underprivileged nationality always has predominated in physical competition. Today the negroes are in that category and it is through sport that they can make big money or gain an education. They are not soft from lush living and are ambitious to gain their rightful place in society.

Mix that concoction with their natural coordination and a plenty of physical strength and courage. You come up with capable athletes. Meanwhile, their white brethren have found easier ways of making a living and many potentially great athletes just can't be bothered, principally because they have no need, either socially or financially.

Nevertheless, if an African nation develops sufficient population and an economy which allows a variety of leisure time activity, watch out. It will be hard to beat.

ANOTHER ONE DOWN

A news report this week quoted Rep. James A. Haley, of Florida, as saying that the jig was up and the Kinzua dam couldn't be stopped. Inasmuch as he was one of the few on the Interior Affairs Committee actively opposed to the project, this should be encouraging to the proponents.

COMEDY WITHOUT LAUGHS

This is going to be a big year for comedy. I don't mean you're going to die laughing. TV comedy has outgrown laughter (What am I saying?) Danny Thomas, one of the few comedy shows to push the gun-slingers aside in the rating list, is on record as saying that there is no law says you have to make people laugh every minute, which saying you don't have to make them laugh at all on television. Off hand I can't recall having ever laughed at the Danny Thomas show. Very successful show. But not really a very funny one. Television situation comedy is pasteurized. All the germs have been taken out. All the laughs have been taken out, too. But then you don't have to laugh at T.V. comedy. They do the laughing for you. By machine, yet. You can just sit there with your mouth open and your diaphragm relaxed and let the machine do the work for you. Ah, this modern age!

 These somewhat bitter thoughts occurred after watching Oscar Levant the other night. Mr. Levant who is the original sick comedian, can make me laugh. Of course, he can make me wince, too. It is the nature of laughter that it is composed, at least partly, of shock. It is the unexpectedness of the line that takes the laugh out of you and when you pasteurize humor, when enough people handle it and inspect it to be sure it doesn't offend the sponsor's wife or any race, creed, or color, then the shock is taken out of it and you have to bring in the laugh tracks to do the laughing for you.

Some of television's really great comics—Lucille Ball, Phil Silvers, Sid Caesar, Jackie Gleason -- would scare a laugh out of you by sheer vehemence and electricity, even with pasteurized humor.

To get back to Mr. Levant, a fixture in southern California who can now be seen on clear nights (like Echo) at the end of Long Island, the voltage lies entirely in his lines, not in his delivery. "The secret of my marriage to June is that neither of us can stand me."

he said right at the outset of his show the other night. A great line. You get a bunch of them in, Oscar's rambling, desultory way--little sparks of total irrelevance and electricity and wit and reminiscence, impossible to pin down in print. Levant can make me laugh by the sheer unexpectedness of his response. (I'm told by Californians that, if you watch Levant often enough, the unexpected becomes the expected, but I haven't seen that much.)

He is assisted in this enterprise by his wife, June, and she can be pretty sharp and unexpected, too. Oscar was telling her that kinning people was a sex thrill, except in executions, which took the sex out of it. "You learn something every day," commented Mrs. Levant. Later, Steve Allen came aboard to plug his new book "Mark It and Strike It." Mrs. Levant suggested that the pair -- Allen and Levant run for President and Vice-President, and Levant delivered a delicious line: "Outside of the two candidates, I can't think of anyone more inadequate than us."

At one point Mrs. Levant was grumbling about Jack Paar: "I still don't like his calling you nutty," she said. "Well," commented Levant candidly, "If we went to court about that, we'd have some trouble."

There have been a good many comedies, summer shows called "Comedy Spot" and "New Comedy Showcase," which are more or less graveyards for pilot films of series that didn't quite get a sponsor. Well, not quite graveyards. If they hit hard enough, they might get a sponsor yet. I found one of the shows, called "The Trouble With Richard," starring Dick van Dyke, pretty funny. Van Dyke is a very likable comedian with a lot of talent of the left-footed, foot-in-mouth, double-take variety. He played a mild little bank clerk who keeps messing up the bank in his absent-minded way. It had its moments, which is more than I can say for most TV comedy.

Most of the rest are what I like to think of as comedy by slide-rule. One of them featured Jack Carson playing adventure for laughs. He was a TV newscaster who got into scrapes a sort of cowardly lion. Carson wasn't bad but the comedy was awfully worked over. Still another on the show called "Comedy Spot" brought together Chico and Harpo Marx in an all-silent farce called "The Incredible Jewel Robbery." I'd like to say something nice about the wonderful Marx brothers, but this wasn't their day. The comedy was ingenious but it just wasn't funny. (c) 1960 New York Herald Tribune Inc.

DEPICTING IN costume the various countries visited by Ethel Young during her stay in the Far East were: Mr. and Mrs. Loyal Briggs in Indonesian costumes from Djakarta; Sharon Anderson in the Vietnamese costume from Saigon; Marjorie Phillips and Margaret Granquist in Indian saris from Singapore; Sally Briggs in a Japanese kimono; Edwin Branstrom, Lynn Branstrom and Alice Branstrom in Filipino costumes from Manila.

ETHEL YOUNG explained the function of the spirit shows of Bangkok during her program at Eisenhower High School last Tuesday evening.

Miss Young spoke to a group of nearly 450 persons during a two hour session giving the highlights of her recent two year assignment as elementary supervisor for the Far Eastern Division of the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventist Denomination.

A free will offering was accepted with all money above the expense of the rental of the auditorium for the evening going to the fund designated for Mr. and Mrs. Anton Lindquist. Miss Young stated she did this because she believed home missions are as important as foreign missions. The generous offering was appreciated.

TE LA DI O

PIE IN THE EYE

COMING TO TV

Recently the ABC network launched a new television series titled "Silents, Please" which is a rerun of old silent movies. This seemed to be a cue for a revival of the old Mack Sennett brand of comedy and so a new series is in the making. All the old familiar Sennett touches will be employed, the frantic chases, the Keystone Cops, the Sennett bathing beauties and presumably the gooeey cream pie in the eye.

CBS COUNTERS WITH OWN ELECTION SERIES

Much ado has been made of NBC's forthcoming series dealing with the campaign and election, "The Great Debate." Now CBS is countering with its own special treatment of the events ahead.

The CBS series will be titled "Presidential Countdown" and is a nine-week series of nighttime programs beginning Monday, Sept. 12, 10:30-11 p.m. and ending Friday, Nov. 4, at 9:30 p.m.

The series will follow the race as it develops from week to week with on-the-spot-coverage provided by CBS news teams traveling with the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates. Major issues will be explored and leading political figures interviewed.

PARLONS FRANCAIS

The first in-school course of instruction to be offered on a nation-wide basis via television will begin in September when at least 16 educational TV stations participate in "Parlons Francais." This radically new method of teaching a foreign language is being sponsored by Louis de Rochemont Associates, long experienced in documentary and educational films.

The National Education Television and Radio Center will distribute the series to a potential 75-million audience.

A native French teacher, Mme. Anne Slack, will be the instructor and at least two million elementary school pupils will begin the French language simultaneously via television. The experiment had its trial run in Boston last year when the series was telecast into 1200 classrooms to 35,000 participating youngsters.

FUTURE PROGRAMS

THE CAT AND THE CANARY will be the drama on the Dow Hour of Great Mysteries Tuesday evening, Sept. 27.

THE STORY OF A FAMILY will be the study of an actual American family's history encompassing a span of three generations since the turn of the century. It will cover the impact on family life of two world wars, a depression and a boom and the last-decade technological revolution. It will be aired by NBC on Nov. 14, 7:30-8:30 p.m.

AND FREEDOM SINGS will be the Bell Telephone Hour's salute to Veterans' Day on Friday, Nov. 11 at 9-10 p.m. David Wayne will be host and Alfred Drake will head the cast which includes Mindy Carson, Genevieve, Barbara Cook and Gisele MacKenzie. The United States Military Academy Glee Club and the Bell Telephone Orchestra will be featured.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT'S DIAMOND JUBILEE PLUS ONE is a special one-hour NBC program saluting Eleanor Roosevelt and the Cancer Research Foundation which bears her name. It will be seen Friday, Oct. 7, 9-10 p.m. Bob Hope will be host and head the cast of more than twenty personalities prominent in the entertainment world and in world affairs.

THE NBC SATURDAY PROM is the NBC-TV daytime series scheduled to begin in October. Planned for late Saturday afternoon telecast it will feature live music and each week's show will also have one of the country's top bandleaders as well as prominent recording stars in the field of popular music.

NAMES MAKE TV NEWS

JERRY LEWIS has been released by NBC from his five-year contract which still has a year to run. Lewis was scheduled to do six specials this year but because of heavy movie commitments NBC agreed to termination of his contract.

DANNY KAYE will make three appearances for CBS this coming season. He will have Louie Armstrong as guest for his Oct. 30 show. To date, Danny's only TV appearance has been the United Nations children's telecast.

BOBBY DARIN will be special guest star in the premiere episode of "Dan Raven", NBC's new mystery series starting Friday, Sept. 23, 7:30-8:30 p.m. Skip Homeier has the title role.

RALPH EDWARDS begins his ninth television season Sunday, Sept. 25, 10:30 p.m., when his "This Is Your Life" show switches to an evening time spot.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE will star in a dual role for the Sunday, Sept. 18 premiere of "The Shirley Temple Show". She will play the part of Princess Ozma and the small boy Tip in "The Land of Oz." Others in the cast will be Jonathan Winters, Ben Blue, Arthur Treacher, Agnes Moorehead, to name a few.

LOWELL THOMAS will return to the NBC network this coming season to serve as host and narrator for the "Our American Heritage" series of seven historical dramatizations.

AN ERA PASSES

In our Wednesday edition and on pages of this issue you will find stories and pictures of the HyVis Oil and Red Jacket football teams, two of the greatest, and probably the best, football aggregations ever to represent Warren, or the Warren area. They packed Russell field with enthusiastic fans who watched them dump the best professional teams within Sunday traveling distance, and attracted thousands from neighboring cities, including Erie, Jamestown, Bradford, and Buffalo.

They won the Western Pennsylvania semi-pro title several times and stopped big, tough squads that had been in the business for years. They were acclaimed in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, and were invited there to play their big league clubs. George Halas described them as the best semi-pro football team he ever had seen.

It was a happy sports era for Warren. In the HyVis Oil period we also had a basketball team in the national circuit. It couldn't support itself here and it drained the pockets of the manager so completely that he was forced to take it into bigger cities where later it won national honors.

These teams were made possible by a combination of circumstances, some of them not to be envied, perhaps, but the results on Russell field were pleasing. They were depressing years and young athletes were not working steady. In fact, most of them were not drawing a dime by way of a regular pay check. The result was that many very capable boys were willing to risk their bones in semi-pro action on a chance that there might have been some bucks in the till after expenses were paid.

There were seasons when they did well. There were others when they got mostly exercise, fresh air, and bruises. Big names like Notre Dame's Larry Danbom and Pittsburgh's Warren Heller, both All-Americans, won't put on a uniform these days until they have signed a $10,000 contract. But they came to Warren on Sundays and provided the fans with the most exciting football ever witnessed by most of them. They played a wide-open game and won by the skin of their fingers and a fast ripple of the pigskin.

Al Crevar, who played at Edinboro, and could have made any big name college squad, was a sensation. And men like Funair, Johnsonburg's coach, and Warren's own Warren Check, Frank Sirianni, Harry Wooster, Bob Main, and many others gave a professional performance.

It was, however, the early Hy-Vis boys who got the show on the road, under the conditions we have mentioned, and established a name which kept the team going for many years. Following the war the boys came back in condition and wanted to play ball. They formed a good team and did well, but the dollar bill began to take over. The money wasn't there for regular pay checks, enthusiasm for picking up the bills was waning, and jobs were prolific.

With prosperity came a different approach to sports. There was money in the game for the really good and Warren could not compete with professional salaries. The play for fun day was gone, and even if a team were formed, the competition also was becoming anemic.

There were some stalwarts, however, who played under all conditions, and we would be remiss if we lamented the passing of this era without a word for such as Rosy Rosequist. Here was one of the best. Rosy stood up to the biggest and the toughest that the visiting teams sent in. He played every minute, and he fought every minute. He was representative of the guts required to field teams like the Oilers and the Jackets. He represented courage on the field and it rubbed off on his teammates.

Rosy's temper has been close to the surface down through the years, and he has taken some rides for it. But he had the kind of competitive fire it required to stand up to the big timers in the days when the Oilers often met each other for the first time on Sunday, learned the plays in the huddle, and ran with a guess, a hope someone would be out there, and by golly he was.

It was wide open football, exciting football, and had much that you never will see again on a local field.

THE BIGGEST RACE OF THE YEAR

Don't give fire a place to start!

LET'S TALK SPORTS

By Bill Massa

THE FRANKLIN KNIGHTS are reported to be the favorites once more in the chase for the Section Two football crown. . . the Knights lost several seniors, but have a good returning nucleus around which to form their '60 version.

THE ERIE ACADEMY ELEVEN, which will travel to Warren on Saturday, Oct. 15, is also rumored to have a powerhouse this season. . . they will be the team to watch in the Big Seven Conference in the Erie area.

COACH RALPH VEIGHTS of the Warren High Dragons has stated that he possesses a fairly speedy group in his backfield. . . and we have seen some good defensive work from a few heavy newcomers to the local squad.

THE OBSERVER will again attempt its skill in prognosticating the football results from the collegiate and professional gridirons this coming season. With the added American Football League our prophets expect to have a greater test of their skill, and on more we caution our readers not to use "Observer Picks" for any wagers.

LAST YEAR'S RESULTS found Bill and John batting at a .672 clip. . . .560 for the NFL and .708 in the college ranks.

AND TO THE HARDWOODS. A group of Sheffield young men are already making extensive plans for entry into the basketball circuit this season. They have lost some old faces, but we understand high-scoring Bob Kolesar and Don Labesky will be back to torment their foes. The team will be known as the Sheffield Saints.

THE SODA MINERAL softball team, which will soon wind up its summer season, is also talking about the formation of a court team comprised of the same members of the diamond squad.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE (about a year, perhaps) softball officials are hoping to have dug-outs constructed plus added bleacher facilities at the local softball diamond on the West Side. . . all comments on the fence put up this season have been on the favorable side, except for those ball-hawking outfielders who keep hollerin' "I could have had it, if that fence wasn't there", but it's there and the game has improved.

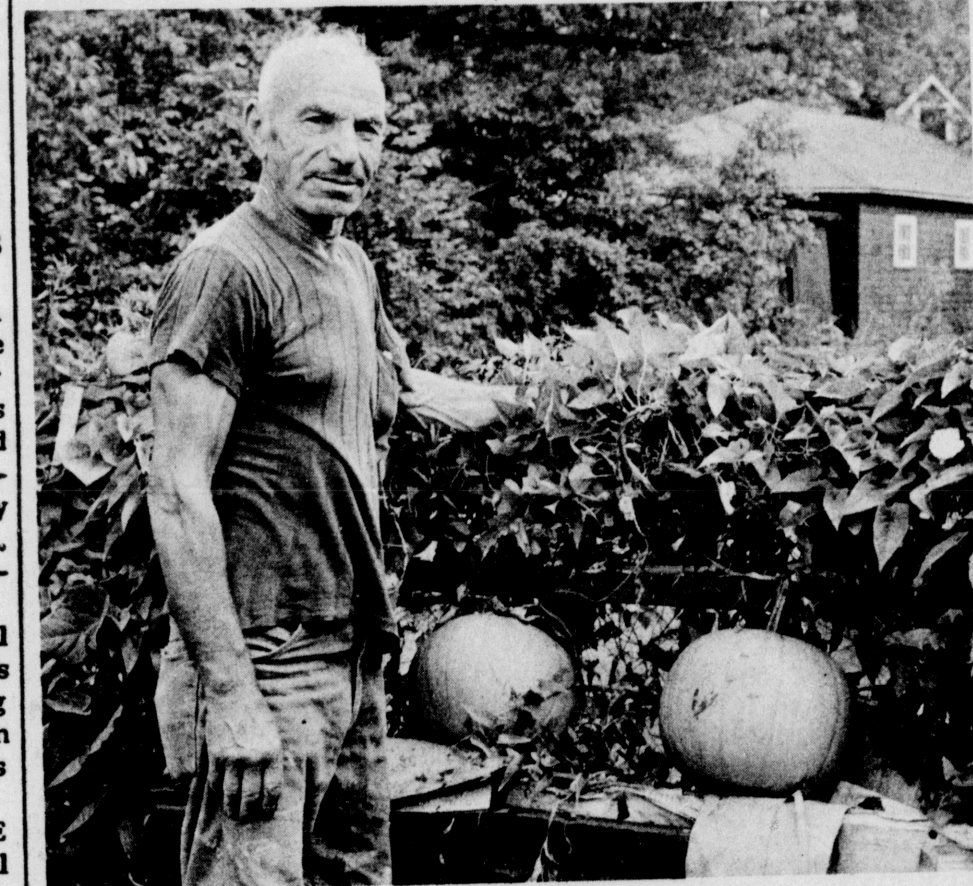

SHEFFIELD BB FANS, do you remember that 81 to 65 trouncing suffered by the Wolverines at the hands of Commodore Perry this spring in the PIAA playoffs? . . . we're sure you do. If the pair meet again this season Commodore Perry will have a new coach to match wits with Ralph Santo. Last year's assistant coach, Jim McConnell, has taken over the top tutoring role, replacing Bill Storey who went to assume the coaching reins at Tarentum.

ED JOHNSON, president of the Y-Bar-U Saddle Club of Warren, received praise from the Chuck Wagon staff on the Horse Show sponsored recently by the local riders. The Junior Baseball Association in Franklin is sponsoring a similar affair on Sept. 18 at CPT field in Franklin.

DUANE KITTNER, an experienced rider from the Y-Bar-U Saddle Club, who participates so faithfully in the area horse shows, was recently injured in a New York state show. We understand that Duane was competing in the pole bending event when he suffered the back injuries.

GOLF TOURNEY WINNER, Craig Wolfe fired rounds of 42 and 42 for an 84 which won him the trophy in the Caddy Golf Tournament held Monday at the Conewango Country Club. He is pictured receiving his trophy from pro Wally Holmes. In the background are Bruce Lawton (l.), who shot 45-48--93 for third place, and Rick Gebhardt (r.), who had 44-45--89 for second. These two received golf balls.

EARLY PUMPKINS. Here stands Peter Massa, 28 S. South st., with two full grown pumpkins which have been ripe for nearly a month. The orange beauties serve little purpose in the months of August and September, but wait till the goblins and witches appear late in October, and then you will find the happy faces of Jack-O-Lantern in every nook and cranny. And stay out of Mr. Massa's garden until that time.

Area Sports

BANTAM CHAMPIONS

Last evening on Lacy field the Dairy Queen team of the eastern bantam division of the City Hot Stove League won the loop pennant with a 14 to 3 verdict over Thomas Flexible Coupling. The eastern division of the bantam circuit ended in a three-way tie between the DQ, the Warren Observer, and the Newell Press team, which drew the bye in the playoff series.

The Dairy Queen, managed by Gus Nelson, squeezed by the Observer, 5 to 4, and went on to win the eastern flag chase with a 19 to 2 onslaught of the Newell Press nine.

In the first game of the championship series with Thomas Flexible, the charges of Nelson scored a 10 to 3 win behind the four-hit pitching of Terry Albaugh. Terry fanned twelve men and aided his own cause by hitting for the cycle--a single, double, triple, and home run.

STATELINE SEASON ENDS WITH TWO GALA FEATURES

The summer racing season at the Stateline Speedway will come to a halt on Labor Day, and it appears as though Hyle Russell, of Kane, will be the 1960 point champion. Russell leads the pack by nearly 200 points and needs only to finish in the top ten of Saturday night's 100-lap Grand Championship to clinch the title.

Five events are slated for tomorrow's program, the first race to get under way promptly at 8:30 p.m.

On Monday the jalopies, the 1953 and earlier models, take the oval for the third time this season. A North Collins, N.Y. driver, Pepper Martin, won the Summer Championship, and the popular Bobby Schnars of Busti won the Mid-Season event. Both will be on the track in Monday's show, which also starts at 8:30 p.m.

CVCC SWIMMERS END '60 SUMMER SEASON

The 1960 summer swimming season for the Conewango Valley Country Club "fish" came to a close the early part of this week as the charges of Pat Madden were dropped by the Moonbrook Country Club, 54 to 37. The CVCC squad ended the year with one win and six setbacks in dual meet competition, but fared well in the registered individual AAU meets.

Chip Lucia and Timmy Donovan took first places in the recent meet, Chip winning the boys 15 and under 50-yard freestyle and Timmy coming home first in the boys 10 and under 25-yard freestyle.

The CVCC's 15 and under 100-yard freestyle foursome comprised of Chip Lucia, Carol Martin, Lane Donovan, and Pete O'Connor, also came in ahead of Moonbrook's relay team.

KEGLERS ALLEY

AT THE PENN LANES

Keglers in the area are looking forward to the appearance of renown bowler Joe Joseph, of Detroit, at the Penn Lanes on Sept. 18. At that time Joseph, who has ten perfect games to his credit, will give an exhibition of his style and offer tips to those present at the newly redecorated Penn Bowling Center.

First league play on the alleys at the Penn will commence Sept. 12 when the City League teams take to the maples at 9 p.m. Team rosters will be carried in next Wednesday's Observer.

Fairway Shots...

TOURNAMENT ECHO

Over a quarter of a century ago Tim Creal crossed sticks with Hank Fisher for the championship of the Conewango Valley Country Club. Tim won. Last week, for the seventeenth time, he won again. His opponent? Hank Fisher's son, Ross.

Hank no longer chooses to be a challenger. We suspect he would be difficult if he cared to participate.

Tim in his play indicated that a surge of youth may be threatening to take things over on the Conewango course, but it won't be made easy. When Denny Lyons in a recent junior tournament posted a 32, many oldsters raised their eyes hopelessly toward the skies and gave their shoulders a rheumatic shrug. The end was in view.

Then came along Mr. Tim. He fired a 31 in his opening round. It was too much, even for youth.

FEMININE RESULTS

Joan Carter posted an 89 and Anne Blackman used 29 putts to take two of the honors Wednesday when the ladies braved the heat wave for their weekly session. B. J. Fisher, the current club champion, took the first division match against par and was second for low net with 76.

Marie Hamilton and Helen Culbertson led the net contest with 75's. In the second division Kay Walker had a 70 and Charlotte Calderwood had 72. They also tied for match play honors.

In the third division Guin Knapp had 70 and Barbara DeFrees shot 72. They tied in the match play special.

Patty Lundahl's 71 led fourth division, and Phil Davis was second with 72. Phil was the match play winner.

MEN'S PLAY

They paid off for the least putts in the Conewango Valley Country Club men's day action yesterday. Bill Rice had 11 in the first flight, Harold Smith 12 in the second, Dr. Giunta had 12 in the third, Dr. O'Connor and Carl Lundahl, 13 in the fourth, and Stu Beckly had 13 in the fifth.

Net winners in each flight were Pete Juliano, Dean Anderson, Sam Rasmussen, Norman Lundahl, Lou Werner, and John Haggerty.

Vital To Safe Driving

Careful trip planning is one of the vital keys to safe driving, especially over the coming Labor Day week end, according to the Warren County Motor Club.

"Planning includes knowing your destination and just how far you are going to travel, then allowing plenty of time to get their without pressure," Ralph E. Brasington, president said.

"Starting out earlier often means the difference between arriving at your destination safely, or not arriving at all.

"Knowing your route ahead of time also is important," the AAA spokesman pointed out. When drivers know what turns they are going to make and when they must make them, they can concentrate more on driving and less on seeking directions.

"Accidents often are caused by such motorist confusion that leads to making sudden, thoughtless decisions to turn, stop or slow down with no regard to other motorists following or approaching.

"Plan ahead for this Labor Day week end trip; then drive as if you planned to arrive safely," Mr. Brasington advised.

THEY'RE BRINGING 'EM BACK. This is the active committee which is responsible for the Warren Red Jackets--HyVis Oils Football Reunion which will be held this Sunday afternoon at the Marconi Outing Club.

For those who may have been overlooked and have changed their mind about attending Sunday's affair, there is still time to contact Harry Wooster to make reservations.

From 150 to 200 former players from the former Warren semi-pro teams are expected to attend the reunion which starts at 1 o'clock in the afternoon with a social period at the Marconi Outing Club. Dinner is scheduled for 6:30. A program, with Bill Rice as emcee, will follow.

The HyVis Oils footballers organized in 1933 and ran through the 1936 season. Upon losing their sponsor, the players formed an organization known as the Warren Red Jackets. This team played until the war busted it up in 1940, but was reorganized in 1947 and offered Warren fans three more years of professional ball.

YOUR FOREST RANGER

By Larry Stotz

The heavy demand for developed campground space on the Allegheny National Forest during July and August has reflected a nation-wide crisis in family camping facilities.

Local experience with recreation trends has shown an increased interest in family camping -- with campgrounds situated beside flowing water being the most popular.

The desire to rough it while on a camping trip is pretty much a thing of the past. Today's campers want to be comfortable, and they will spare no expense to achieve that goal. They are wedded to their cars and they expect to be able to drive them right up to the sites where they intend to pitch their tents. And no wonder, for they bring along a most bewildering array of gadgets.

The plain, functional wall tent of yesterday with its heavy canvas, and clumsy wooden poles, was as primitive by today's standards as a log cabin with a dirt floor. Modern campers can choose from a wide variety of tents made from light, strong material complete with floors and fine mesh plastic screens that keep out the tiniest of biting insects. There are "pop-tents" that require no poles, and take only 90 seconds to erect; umbrella tents with adjustable aluminum center poles; wall tents equipped with screened windows for ventilation, and with adjustable ridge poles. For family camping, there are three-room tents with dividing curtains to insure privacy.

The bough bed has been replaced by the air mattress, or the light-weight aluminum cot. Blankets have given way to feather-weight sleeping bags that will keep the occupants warm on the chilliest nights.

Modern campers provide themselves with folding tables and easy chairs of light-weight metal; gasoline stoves and charcoal grills, and portable coolers to keep beverages cold. There are play pens for the babies, and perhaps a badminton set for the whole family to enjoy. The inevitable portable radio is usually on hand to keep them in constant touch with the troubled world from which they are trying to escape. If they are camped near water they may come equipped with a fantastic collection of accessories for the enjoyment of water sports.

It was unfortunate that so many campers had to be turned away from developed campgrounds on the Allegheny National Forest this summer because all of the sites were filled. At Buckaloons, which is not supervised by a concessionaire, over-use resulted because campers insisted on crowding in between established sites that were already occupied. This resulted in an invasion of privacy for those who were camped at any of the ten authorized sites.

"Togetherness," which has become so much a part of American life today, is hardly appreciated by families who are trying to regain their individuality for a few days by going camping.

Over-use of a campground results in sanitation problems: trampling and eventual breakdown of the soil cover. It can turn a pleasant river front into a rural slum.

New camping facilities will be developed on the Allegheny National Forest as rapidly as funds permit, and wherever possible these recreation areas will be located close to water.

Until there are enough facilities to take care of the demand, campers should whenever possible camp during the middle of the week, and avoid too lengthy stays. Too often a trailer is backed into a tent site, and then only used on week-ends while occupying the site all during the week. The practical application of the Golden Rule on these public campgrounds can do much to relieve the crisis in family camping facilities.

Watery Rhubarb

ROME, Aug. 30.—The normal Roman diet of fettucini, cannelloni, lasagne, gnocchi, saltimbocca and spaghetti is being fortified these days by forced feedings of American rhubarb, fresh but watery. If Lyman Bingham, Max Ritter and a gallant band of seekers after truth can keep the stew cooking, as they mean to do, these Olympics may yet have a swap of medals like the one that enlivened the 1948 games in London.

Twelve years ago the magic lantern of J. Arthur Rank exposed myopia in a patrol judge who had disqualified the victorious United States 400-meter relay team because, he said, two runners had exchanged batons outside the legal zone. When films proved the exchange was strictly kosher, an international jury ordered America installed as winner instead of Great Britain, the Olympic band had to unplay "God Save the King," and couriers went scouring through half the hock shops in London to recover gold and silver medals for their proper recipients.

Today the brass of America's swim team got bubbled-eyed staring at the video tape of last Saturday night's 100-meter freestyle final to confirm their conviction that the placing judges had rocks in their heads when they called Australia's John Devitt the winner over Lance Larson, of El Monte, Calif.

The longer they squinted at Columbia Broadcasting System's monitor the more convinced they were that Larson got jobbed. They are asking officials of F. I. N. A., the ruling body of international swimming, to study the tape, even though the group already has rejected the United States protest without glancing at the evidence.

Solomon-on-the-Spot

MAX RITTER, a veteran of the moist mangelwurgels who is a member of the F. I. N. A. executive board, was calling a protest before Larson and Devitt had shaken the water out of their ears. Notwithstanding, the dripping swimmers were rushed with almost unseemly haste to the sacrificial altar to get their hardware while Australia's flag was hoisted and the band played "God Save the Queen."

Only afterward was it learned that Devitt got a split decision weighted in his favor by a nudnick who wasn't entitled to vote. Two first-place judges had plumped for Devitt, one for Larson; two second-place judges had picked Devitt second, one Larson.

One timer crouching over Larson's lane clocked him in 55 seconds, two others in 55.1. All three in Devitt's lane caught the Aussie in 55.2.

Thus the judges were split down the middle and the timer's unanimous for the American. Brushing off the evidence of the clocks as well as the electric timing tape—which is synchronized with the watches and necessarily told the same story—H. Runstromer, of Sweden, tossed in the deciding vote for Devitt, though as chief judge he had no vote and wasn't with the others at the finish line.

In a letter rejecting the protest, Bertil Sallfors, F. I. N. A. secretary and referee of the meets, gave an odd explanation of this odd procedure. After writing that the Bureau of Appeal had "investigated all details" (though it had ignored the timers, timing tape and TV record), Sallfors added: "The bureau decided that the chief judge had the right to vote when the order of arrival is established."

The Videots

OKAY, the Americans reasoned, if they couldn't win in the pool or the court of appeal, maybe they could score on the videot box. Out they trotted to the CBS studio at the airport—Ritter and Bingham, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee; Dr. Harold Henning, chairman of the A. A. U. Swimming Committee who was judging in another lane; Lawrence Johnson, chief timer, and Ray Daughters, manager of the swimming team.

Over and over they ran the pictures. "There." They would grunt as the racers turned to the finish. "Now, Whoie."

"Every time I see it, Bingham said, I'm surer Larson won." Because video tape can be run in slow-motion CBS put a slow-motion camera on the monitor screen. The film made thus was fresh in the can, unseen even by the technicians, when it was projected on a screen for the visitors. It was a shadowy picture, but it did step the action down.

One slow motion shot in particular seemed so conclusive that at least one unbiased viewer, who hadn't been satisfied watching the monitor, was convinced Larson had won.

Last Appeal

"GENTLEMEN" Ritter asked rising "does anybody have any doubts?"

Nobody spoke up, but there is still no assurance the nabobs of F. I. N. A. will accept the new evidence. It appeared that both swimmers finished their last stroke with their fingers inches short of the wall and slid forward a few inches to touch home with outstretched left arm under water.

On this vital point, however, the cameras testimony isn't quite vivid enough to convince some one who prefers not to be convinced. This isn't incontrovertible proof, like the film in London, which was pretty near unique in that respect. Films almost never settle disputes like these. Generally it turns out that at the crucial moment the cameraman was ogling a blonde.

"THAT MAN SCORES, TONY". Umpire-in-chief Harry Rosequist points out (with a whisk broom) to Soda Mineral manager Tony Bonavita that Betts' Ned Bartholomew is entitled to score on a pass ball that went behind the screen at the West Side diamond. The action, which took place during the Betts-Soda final Shaughnessy play-off game, made the score 4 to 3 in the distributors' favor. They went on to win, 5 to 3, to cop the Shaughnessy title, three games to none.

THE OBSERVER CAMERA catches Bud Speicher grimacing at the peak moment of one of his softball pitching deliveries. Ready to take a swat at the pitch is Betts' hurler John Berdine. The catcher for Soda Mineral is Jack White, and the umpire, whose judgements must be very fast and accurate, is Harry Rosequist.
